Research in Progress:

"Auditor Tenure and the Allowance for Doubtful Accounts" – with W. Pasewark and D. Oler, both of Texas Tech University.

This project examines the question of whether differences in auditor tenure result in differences in accounting estimates, specifically the allowance for doubtful accounts receivable. We will test the idea that more experience with a client results in better estimates. We use a hand-collected set of allowance for doubtful accounts data from firms' 10-Ks covering the years 2000-2016. Anticipated submission date - late 2020 / early 2021.

"Opinions of Practitioners Regarding PCAOB Disclosure of Audit Engagement Partner Names" - with M. Mellon of Northern Illinois University and R. Marley of the University of Tampa.

We obtain the opinions of practitioners from audit, tax, and consulting areas of practice regarding the PCAOB's decision to disclose the names of the engagement partners on audits of publicly traded firms. We ask questions about the difference this disclosure will make in audit practice and quality and investors' decisions. We anticipate separating results by respondents' practice areas and by the types of clients the respondents serve in practice. The results will shed important light for both regulators and practitioners on the opinions of practitioners about audit practice, the PCAOB, and the disclosure of audit engagement partner names.
